Pisco is a flavourful grape-based spirit from Peru. Made from 100% grapes. Peruvian pisco must be made using the same traditional methods of production introduced more than 400 years ago, and no additives, colouring, flavouring of any kind or even water is added at any time, and it is this purity that sets pisco apart from other spirits. Peruvian pisco can only be produced from a single distillation to create a product that is between 38% to 48% ABV. After distillation, the pisco must rest, or ripen, for a minimum of three months stored only in vessels that will not influence the flavour or aroma.

There are three styles of pisco that can be produced in Peru.

PURO: This is the broad term for pisco made from a single variety of grape.

MOSTO VERDE: This means 'green must' and refers to piscos distilled from a partially fermented young wine. This style tends to have a greener, richer flavour, greater texture, and producing a super premium style of pisco.

ACHOLADO: This term refers to piscos made from a blend of various grape varieties. Acholados can be made with any combination of two or more types of grape. Pisco may be blended from either a combination of Pisco Puro or Mosto Verdo styles, but never both. There are eight grape varieties that can be used to make Peruvian pisco that can be divided into the two broad categories of 'aromatic' and 'non-aromatic':

Non Aromatic: Quebranta, Negra Criolla, Mollar, Uvina
Aromatic: Italia, Torontel, Moscatel, Albilla
